

JURIS DOCTOR (JD)

Juris Doctor

The School of Law offers the Juris Doctor (JD) degree as well as several dual-degree programs. The JD degree requires successful completion of 88 credit hours, of which 44 hours are in specified required courses, at least 2 credits in the writing of a substantial research paper, 8 hours of an experiential capstone project, and at least 34 elective credits. The first year program for the JD degree consists mainly of the required basic courses.

Curricular Concentrations

Seven curricular concentrations are offered for the Juris Doctor. These optional concentrations allow students to provide a concentrated focus for some of their elective coursework. The current available curricular concentrations are:

- Business Law
- Criminal Law
- Litigation / Alternative Dispute Resolution
- Health Law
- International Law
- Law, Technology, and the Arts
- Public Law

Elective courses

In addition to the required courses and the optional curricular concentrations, all students must take open elective courses in order to earn a minimum of 88 credits of law school coursework to qualify for the Juris Doctor degree. All students must enroll for a full-time course load each semester (10 - 18 credits), and must complete at least six regular semesters of full-time coursework. Optional summer courses may be used to reduce the credit load during a regular semester, but the student must still complete at least six regular full-time semesters (summer does not count as a regular semester.) Students may choose to take one open elective course under a "Pass/No Entry" credit basis, wherein the grade earned for the course is converted to a Pass or No Entry, and the course doesn't affect the student's grade point average.

Graduate School Option

Students in the School of Law who are not enrolled in a dual-degree program may take up to nine hours of approved courses in the other graduate and professional schools of Case Western Reserve University and have such courses counted as elective credit toward the JD degree. Such coursework must be graduate-level coursework, and must be closely related to the study of law and the student's educational/career objectives.

Academic Regulations

A complete list of Academic Regulations for the Juris Doctor program are contained in the Law Student Handbook. Questions can be directed to the law school's Academic Services Office.

Class Attendance Policy

JD students are required to attend all class sessions for which they are registered. Instructors will provide details of their procedures and policies regarding class absence at the beginning of the course.

Students who fail to meet responsibilities for class attendance and preparation are subject to dismissal from a course by the Instructor.

Students dismissed from a course will receive a grade of WF for the course and will not be eligible to take the exam or complete the work in the class.

JD Curricular Concentrations

JD students have an option to earn a curricular concentration by focusing their course selections within a particular area of legal study. Requirements for each particular concentration are listed below. In order to receive the concentration, students must earn at least 15-18 credits (varies by the specific concentration) in courses within the concentration, and earn an overall grade point average of 3.000 or higher amongst all courses defined by that concentration. Each concentration has a number of prescribed required courses, along with a menu of courses that can counted as elective hours. Each concentration also has a writing requirement (a substantial research paper on a topic applicable to the concentration) and a capstone experience requirement (related to the concentration). Specific courses applicable to each concentration are subject to change by faculty review. NOTE: New concentration standards have been developed as part of the revised JD curriculum, so students will have differing requirements based on when they first began the study of law. All current students must obtain the relevant concentration curriculum sheet which applies to them from the Law School Academic Services Office. Each concentration has an assigned faculty leader who can assist students with course selection and curriculum planning.
