

ENGLISH, MINOR

Program Overview

The minor in English is for undergraduates who are interested in studying literatures in English but who are majoring in another area of study. Consisting of 15 credit hours, the minor provides both concentrated study of literature and flexibility around major requirements.

Undergraduate Policies

Program Requirements

The minor in English consists of at least credit 15 hours above the 100-level. Students who wish to minor in English should begin by consulting with the department's academic representative. Students should also keep in mind that the flexibility of the department's requirements often makes it possible to take English as a second major.
