

MUSICOLOGY, PHD

Degree: Doctor of Philosophy (PhD)

Field of Study: Musicology

Program Overview

The PhD in Musicology is for students who wish to achieve a high level of knowledge in music history and the methodologies of musicology. The program aims to provide local, regional, national, and international leadership in the field of musicology. The emphasis on research and broad exposure to numerous approaches to analyzing music, as well as experience teaching in the classroom, is meant to prepare students for a variety of fields in or related to music history.

The PhD program, which has grown dramatically over the past decade and attracted a world-class faculty, has a reputation for placing its graduates in major programs in musicology and related fields across the country. The students in the PhD program are active in the larger academic community, giving papers at national and international juried conferences, publishing articles in major refereed journals in all corners of the discipline, and winning highly competitive awards, including fellowships from the American Council of Learned Societies, the American Musicological Society (AMS 50), and the Fulbright Program.

Additional program information is available on the Department of Music Musicology webpage.

Admission

Applicants with good academic records from fully accredited universities and colleges will be considered for admission to graduate study at Case Western Reserve University. Admission must be recommended by the department or professional school of the university in which the applicant proposes to study and must be approved by the dean of graduate studies.

The PhD in musicology is granted in recognition of superior scholarly ability and attainment. Award of the degree is based not only on computation of time or enumeration of courses, but also upon distinguished work. Highly qualified applicants may enter this program directly upon completion of a bachelor's degree.

More information about the graduate application and audition process in music is provided on the Department of Music Graduate Application Procedures webpage.

Music Handbook and Advising

Current graduate and professional students in music should review departmental policies and procedures in the Graduate Music Handbook. The handbook provides additional information regarding graduate assistantships, general expectations and responsibilities, program outcomes, decision points, performances, scholarly activity, outside work, prizes/awards, deadlines, petitions, examinations, advancement to candidacy, and student record-keeping.

Additional resources and forms are available on the Department of Music Resources for Current Graduate Students webpage.

Graduate Policies

Program Requirements

The PhD in Musicology is granted in recognition of superior scholarly ability and attainment. Award of the degree is based not only on computation of time or enumeration of courses, but also upon distinguished work.

All programs of study are formulated to suit the individual needs of the student and require the consent of the research advisor and Coordinator of Graduate Studies. The PhD requires 36 credit units of coursework plus proficiency in two relevant foreign languages and an additional 18 credit units of MUHI 701. Students must submit the "Pre-Doctoral Standing" form in the spring of the second year in order to register for 6 credit units (3 credit units per semester) of MUHI 701. Required coursework includes three doctoral seminars MUHI 590, MUHI 610, and MUHI 612. In the first two years, students will be expected to take three seminars (9 credit units) per semester, for a total of 36 units.

Language and Qualifying Examinations

Students admitted to the program will take diagnostic examinations prior to the start of classes in the first year of the program. Based on these examinations, students may be required to enroll in specific courses to address deficiencies; these course credits may be applied toward the requirement. In December of each year, students will submit an Academic Progress Report (APR). Written evaluations included as part of this report, along with course grades and materials, will constitute the beginnings of the portfolio maintained by the coordinator of graduate studies that will be the basis for considering each student's advancement into the PhD program.

Students must demonstrate ability to read in two foreign languages approved by the Musicology Committee as relevant to the student's research, usually drawn from German, French, Italian, Spanish, and Latin, though exceptions can be made by petition. Language examinations must be taken by the end of the second year unless a successful petition allows for extension of the deadline.

At the beginning of the fall in the third year of study, students will take qualifying (comprehensive) examinations assessing their knowledge and skills across a broad range of subject matter, and which will also function as qualifying exams for advancement to the PhD program. These examinations will consist of written and oral sections, and will be conducted and evaluated by the musicology faculty. Students who do not advance but who have done satisfactory work will be eligible to receive the MA in music history at this juncture.

The Graduate Music Handbook outlines in detail the procedures and timeline for coursework, and language and qualifying examinations.

Dissertation Prospectus, Defense, and Candidacy/Pre-Doctoral Standing

Students who pass their qualifying exams will register for MUHI 701 credits and begin research work for the dissertation. Working with a faculty research advisor, the student will develop a prospectus for the dissertation, which will be presented in writing to the faculty committee at least two weeks before the prospectus defense. The prospectus defense must take place before April 1 of the third year. All other requirements, including language exams, must be satisfied before the defense can be scheduled.

It is expected that the fourth and fifth year of study will be devoted to work on the dissertation; during this time, students will enroll in MUHI 710. Upon completion of the dissertation, each student will present a formal defense to the dissertation committee and members of the public.

Under the rules of the School of Graduate Studies, a student must complete the dissertation no later than five years after registering for the first MUHI 701 credits.

The Graduate Music Handbook outlines in detail the procedures and timeline for dissertation completion and graduation.
